OVER 80 NOMINATED FOR BOYS ALL STATE

BY STEVE HIRD MADISON EDGEWOOD

In previous years we have had a problem with having the best players nominated for All State recognition. The reasons varied from coaches not being a member of the coaches association to late entries. But the most common reason was that coaches were either not taking the time or just forgetting to nominate a deserving player. Last year it was evident we had a problem when 2 of the 3 WIAA state champions and the WISAA champion were not even nominated. In addition there were numerous other deserving players that were not nominated.

For 1992 I headed a committee of one to insure that the best players were nominated. In early May I identified the top 30 players in the state by conferring with coaches in all three classes throughout the state. Each coach was then called or sent a letter informing him that he had a player that should most likely be nominated for all state recognition. The coach was also told whether he was a member of the coaches association. If he was not, then a membership form was sent out. After the WIAA State Tournament was completed I called any coach that hadn't been contacted already who had a player with a high finish. The deadline to have forms sent was the day after the WIAA state tournament which was the day I called.

The campaign was a success with over 80 players nominated compared to 36 the previous two years. There were still a few names that were not nominated but their coaches were contacted and the top players in the state were nominated including the 3 WIAA and WISAA champions.

With the large number of players nominated came some additional work for the board -- namely choosing the roughly 20 players who should represent the 1st thru 3rd teams as well as the honorable mention. Though it was more difficult than previous years our biggest difficulty was with how the player was nominated. Many nomination forms were not completely filled out and many did not have accurate information. Below are some reminders on how to fill forms out properly. This will not only help us with the nomination process but it will give your player the best chance of getting the recognition that he or she deserves.

1. Print or type the entire nomination form. Many forms were not legible.

2. Fill in all names, addresses and newspaper addresses at the top of the form. This information is used to send the all-state certificates to the player's home address as well as sending press releases to the player's local newspaper.

3. The average nine or 18 hole score should be figured to two decimals and not rounded to an even stroke (38.0, 39.0). This average should include every round played for the season.

4. List all Invitational results for the nominated player not just the Invitationals where the player finished high. Fill in all the information asked for and list the player's individual finish not the team finish.

5. List Conference, regional and sectional results completely and as in the invitationals you should list the individual finish, not the team finish.

6. For WIAA state tournament results, these can be omitted due to the nomination deadline unless you send the form in the day after state which is the last day forms need to be post-marked. All state tournament results will be included in the process even if they are left off the form.

7. In the future there will be a line on the form to list all other scores that are not already listed under invitationals, conference, regionals, sectionals or state. This will help to verify averages.

"Hard work and determination will lead to personal growth."

Opinion: Coaching on the CourseStatus Quo: Best Of Both Worlds

There is much controversy among Wisconsin High School Golf Coaches on whether they should or should not be allowed to coach during competition and whether coaches should play golf while their golfers are competing.

It is my opinion, after listening to many coaches around the state, that the current W.I.A.A. rule of allowing coaches to communicate with their players after they have holed out on the last green until they have teed off on the next tee is very popular. The main reason why coaches appear to like this rule is that it gives them an opportunity to talk with and encourage their players, but does not take the game away from the competitors. Golfing skill, course management, strategy, etc., is all part of the preparation for the competition. Once it begins, it should be up to the individual competitor to display his or her talents without any outside interference. David Leadbetter cannot coach Nick Faldo during the actual play of the British Open!

This brings us to the subject of whether coaches should play golf while their golfers are competing. This is an individual matter, but most coaches enjoy playing and definitely look forward to the camaraderie shared with the other coaches. Since you are not coaching during the competition (except between holes if you want to), it makes sense to go out and play golf if you so desire. Tournament directors see that the coaches' foursomes are intersperse with the participant's foursomes to help monitor play. Just the participants' knowing that the coaches are spread out and visible around the course helps to monitor play and see that their behavior is of high standards. The argument that coaches are concerned with playing golf rather than coaching is not a valid one. They have energetically and enthusiastically coached all week and now they are letting their players display their talents while they enjoy a friendly round of golf with their colleagues. You can bet that each coach is nervously anticipating how his or her players are going to do.

Another argument that coaches coach during the competition in most other sports is also a questionable one. Football coaches, basketball coaches, etc, can technically only coach during designated times (time-outs). Wisconsin High School Golf coaches also can coach during designated times (between holes).

Wisconsin High School Golf Coaches are conducting quality programs, many of which are producing outstanding teams and individuals. And the beauty of it is that there is a very friendly relationship between all of those involved (competitors, coaches, tournament workers, etc.) that is not found in many other sports. Maybe it is because we do things. Let's keep going and, yet, always be looking for ways to improve ourselves as coaches.

ages and give the total picture of a player's year.

8. Make sure you are a member of the association. Nominations are not accepted if the coach is not a member of the coaches association.

Remember, your player does not have to be a first team caliber player to be nominated; he could be a second, third or honorable mention player. But only nominate a player if his performance over the year ranks him as a top player in the conference, his region or in state tournament competition.
